Oluwatobi Akintayo is an associate and a member of the firm's banking & finance, project finance, mining and tax teams. He briefly left the firm to obtain an LL.M from Harvard Law School. Throughout his time at the firm, he has been involved in a wide range of matters, including mining, tax advisory, energy, project finance, banking and general corporate advisory. He is a core member of various teams that advises local and international companies as well as development finance institutions and PE firms on debt and equity investments including in the mining, environmental, banking, power, and manufacturing sectors.

Oluwatobi has over 4 years of experience working in the legal and regulatory space for international investment in the natural resources sector and he has been recognised as a "Key Lawyer" by The Legal500 EMEA. Part of his experience includes advising an international JV engaged in the development and manufacture of battery-grade lithium hydroxide in connection with its mining operations as well as its day-to-day activities.

Oluwatobi is actively part of teams that conduct due diligence reviews, in the course of which he evaluates corporate, real estate and regulatory compliance practices and credit portfolios to assess the viability of targeted businesses for merger, investment and financing transactions.
